Renovation has changed North Side's face, but the year has not reduced her spirit. With modern equipment and rooms as teachers' aids, her purposes and goals have been transformed. 'Skins have seen machines rise into a major position this year. With renovation came better facilities for the Music Department, library, Home Economics, English, and Language Departments. With the facilities came more advanced mechanical aids that helped teachers to gradually place the emphasis on learning rather than on memorization. The 20 additional teachers, coupled with the novel ten-period day, made classes smaller. Seniors and juniors were as confused as sophomores during the first weeks of classes, since renovation had drastically altered the class areas and department corridors. One thing remained normal, sophomores still registered pleasure at their new-found freedoms, revelled in the relaxing of the dress code and wider choice of classes.

Despite physical changes, the spirit of Redskins has not suffered. Spirit Week proved that 'Skins maintained the high quality and quantity of spirit even with the retiring of the spirit trophy. Students helped change the atmosphere in football and basketball games, the Winter Concert, and the school itself. Education and spirit continue to thrive as "It's a New World on the Inside."

Bakhshi, Villacorta add excitement to classes

Mr. Sarhia Pal Bakhshi and Mr. Derman Villacorta manage to find time in their schedules to discuss renovation.

Mr. Derman Villacorta and Mr. Sarhia Pal Bakhshi both agreed that North Side is an excellent school and that they enjoyed their visit and work at Domeland.

"The teachers and students were always helpful and made me feel right at home." said Mr. Bakhshi, who arrived from India to teach English. He hoped to return again in the future.

Mr. Villacorta has finished his second year in Domeland teaching Spanish. As he left to return to his home in Peru, South America, he said that he would surely miss the students and people more than anything else. Both teachers and many students exchanged interesting facts about the school, the country, the people, and the different customs.

Mr. Derman Villacorta grades tests and checks papers in the teachers' lounge during one of his work periods.

Explaining a vocabulary list to his junior English classes occupies some of Mr. Sarhia Pal Bakhshi's time. In addition to teaching in his assigned classes, he often speaks to other classes during his free periods.

Claudia, Jean share North's experience

Mary Jo Dick and Claudia Koletzki warm up on their violins before class starts.

The trend at North was foreign for two exchange students, Claudia Koletzki and Jean Schouwers. As the two struggled through the changes of renovation, many memories were born and new friendships bloomed that will perhaps last forever.

Claudia, from Nuremburg, Germany, arrived in July and traveled in the United States with Mr. and Mrs. Fry. Chosen by interviews, she in turn was interviewed by Redskins. Claudia believed that students were more open and free to express feelings than they are in Germany.

Jean arrived and had moved in with Mr. and Mrs. Annis, by the beginning of school. Having already graduated from high school in Brussels, Belgium, he was chosen to come to the United States, and planned to attend Louvain University when he returned. Among the many advantages at North, he liked the extra activities, such as Key Club.

Studying for a test, foreign exchange student Jean Schouwers carefully glances over the material.

Workmen hustle to lay the new wooden floor as basketball season draws near with much work in the gym remaining to be done.

From scratch to finish, Renovation moves on Sanding the auditorium floor is an enormous job for a lone man. Soon many 'Skins will walk its floor again.

Covering the gym rafters will add another new look. The accoustical tile used for the ceiling is used throughout the school.

Students stop by to examine the former study hall being transformed into the new library. It is presently being used as a store room.

Renovation affected many parts of the school, especially the gymnasium. The seats were painted red and white with a plastic coat to prevent splintering. The basket had to be raised one and one-half inches due to the new flooring. When it was completed in December, Redskins continued the basketball season on their home floor.

to more modern and improved concepts

Since its original construction in 1927 only a few alterations have changed North's appearance. But more than forty years of use made renovation of the building inevitable and welcome. Phase I of the renovation was completed last year and included the remodeling of the heating system, the remodeling of the shop area, and the construction of the stadium locker room. Aluminum windows were also installed in all rooms.

The second phase took place this year. It was concerned with remodeling the auditorium and the stage area, the construction of a new parking lot, the building of a new all-weather track, and the building of the tennis courts. New seats, a new floor, and a new ceiling changed the gym. The study hall was turned into the library, and the former library was converted to the music rooms. Blinds were added to all windows.

The third and final phase will be completed in the future. Eventually air conditioning will be added to the offices and cafeteria, and the floors may be retiled. But it was this year especially that brought a new world on the inside.

As the school year nears, the tennis courts come closer to completion. The four new courts are used for physical education classes and tennis team practices. Although the team has not used them this season, they plan to play on them in coming seasons.

Academics

It's a new world on the inside

Learning, experiences, dust, plaster and deafening noises comprised the academic life of students. They worked throughout the year with 20 additional teachers and a ten-period day.

Because of shortened periods, teachers tried to communicate more thoroughly with students. Knowledge was the end result of these communications. Upperclassmen gained more individualized learning in the Communism and Literature Seminars and the flexible schedules. Students applied themselves to sciences for experiments, mathematics for accuracy, and business for discipline. Educators concentrated on students learning rather than memorizing new materials. They utilized visual and audio aids such as films, records, and overhead projectors to reach this goal.

Renovation created some problems and solved others. Teachers and students shouted above the noises of construction, dodged ladders, wires, and scaffolds, and studied by sunlight when fuses were blown. Each department was moved into a corridor by itself with an office in that area.

New-gained knowledge and experiences helped form academics while "It's a new world on the inside."

English Department meets student need

Miss Elizabeth Little demonstrates one of the new additions to the English corridor, the aersol horn.

The English office offers a chance for teachers to get together during the day to discuss classes and students. Mr. Harold Gruver, Mrs. Donna McBane, and Mrs. Sandra Haifley take time out to talk over plans and grade papers.

Mr. Robert Pugh helps Bob Hunter in the library. This is an additional service which the English Department offers.

Mr. Frederick Autenrieth's eighth period Sophomore English class keeps busy by studying modern and traditional poetry.

through individual help, aerosol horn

The flexible English Department curriculum let each teacher adapt to the needs and the potential of each class and helped the classes develop into more student-oriented center.

Instruction helped to develop the humanistic goals and attitudes needed by the students. It also instilled insight into life and human emotions in the students through an increase in the fine literature around them, guiding the students toward a more effective communication with an understanding of their fellow man. The work of the English Department was geared to stimulate the interests of all North Side students. The curriculum consisted of themes, compositions, research papers, the acting of plays, book reports, poetry, and much more. All of these went into giving Redskins not only increased general knowledge, but also improving their personal vocabularies, which was extremely important. Their world demanded that most become educated, well versed young adults. North Side's English Department was one Redskins could all be proud of.

Group discussions are frequent in Mrs. Donna McBane's Junior English classes. Her sixth period class discusses a test over poetry. Small groups also meet to analyze English literature.

Brian Norton, Kathy Eberhardt, Glenda Jones, Cindy Phillips, and Claudia Koletzki listen and Kevin Burke introduces a book to Literature Seminar. In Mr. James Lewinski's class, Redskins can examine literature not offered in English Classes.

Girls learn value of fair play in sports

Sophomore girls run twice around the new all-weather track when the weather permits, learning many activities outside and inside.

The girls' physical education classes taught sportsmanship as well as physical coordination to the girls. It was also a time when the students could relax and enjoy different activities as well as learn new skills. Sophomores participated in archery, badminton, volleyball, gymnastics, co-ed square dancing, tennis, and more. Mrs. Kathleen Capper and Miss Anne Donnelly directed the girls' physical education classes with help from student leaders. Since the swimming pool was not completed, the credit for swimming was not required for graduation of the Class of 1973. Completion of new tennis courts started a new activity, however. Girls learned the basic knowledge of tennis which included the stance, the parts of the racket, keeping score, and the rules to follow when playing.

Nancy McCue demonstrates exactly how to hold and use the bow in archery, just one of the many sports the girls enjoy.

Playing field hockey, girls learn the various equipment, rules, and skills. They are later tested for their accomplishments and progress.

Sophomore boys taking physical education further their skills in flag football, which they play until beginning wrestling in November. Basketball came after the gym was completed. Other activities during the year also help them to keep fit and to learn more about sports.

Boys move outside, learn new skills

Using the area beneath the bleachers, sophomore boys practice the rigors of wrestling together.

As renovation moved into the boys' gym, it presented little trouble for classes as football was the main concern for the fall season. Classes were conducted on the football field, and for locker room facilities, the boys used the area below the bleachers which was designed for the football teams. The boys again took advantage of the brand-new facilities when wrestling classes rolled around. When it was finished in November, the classes moved back into the old-but-new gym, the principal concern bounced to basketball. The weather changed again and boys scurried to the new all-weather track. Although sophomore boys followed tradition as they trotted along the State Street bridge to the Tennessee bridge or to the Coliseum and back again to North, they also had the advantages of playing on a new floor and meeting for physical education in entirely new surroundings.

Business prepares students for professions,

Mrs. Irma Johnson's fifth period beginning shorthand class prepares for coming dictation tests by taking dictation from tapes. By comparing their writing to that in the book, they learn to write the symbols legibly.

Senior Diane Dietz practices from Mrs. Johnson's dictation to achieve and retain shorthand brief forms.

Lana King, junior, counts out paper to get ready to use the mimeograph machine, while Senior Debbie Brubaker types in the background. Service workers aid school personnel by typing, duplicating tests, and collecting attendance slips.

universities

Students in Mr. John Eastes' General Business classes often get in groups to compare problems on homework. In the group here are Elaine Snyder, Barry Huntton, Katrina Trendle, Mr. Eastes, Carl Fike, Jolee Coolman, and Jeff Smith.

Mr. Dale Goon's fifth period Advanced Typing class warms up on five-minute timed writings. In addition, classes also work on business letters, manuscripts, and other types of exercises to develop skill.

The Business Department teaches students different occupations in business and helps the young people get ready for the world that lies ahead for them.

Mr. John Walter, department head, said that schedule problems made it difficult for students and teachers to meet outside of class so the help students needed could be given. But both groups worked hard to integrate the instruction in skill courses, such as typing, shorthand, and bookkkeeping into broader aspects of business. The General Business instruction include banking, budgets, insurance, stock markets, and business vocabulary. All course work was designed for preparing students either for careers or college.

Using calculators for solving problems in clerical practice is common for Debbie Roebuck and Carol Ellison.

Science offers novel teaching methods.

Earth Science involves lectures and studies of the earth's structure, as Mr. John Tipple demonstrates.

Nancy Steiner, Greg Kroemer, and Brad Hitevogt examine the characteristics of different chemicals by burning and combining them.

Understanding the environment in terms of chemical and physical make-up was the general knowledge learned in chemistry, physics, biology and earth science. Chemistry and physics involved a new system which gave teachers and students more free time for individual attention and projects. Using the overhead projector, films, and models the chemistry students adjusted to large groups.

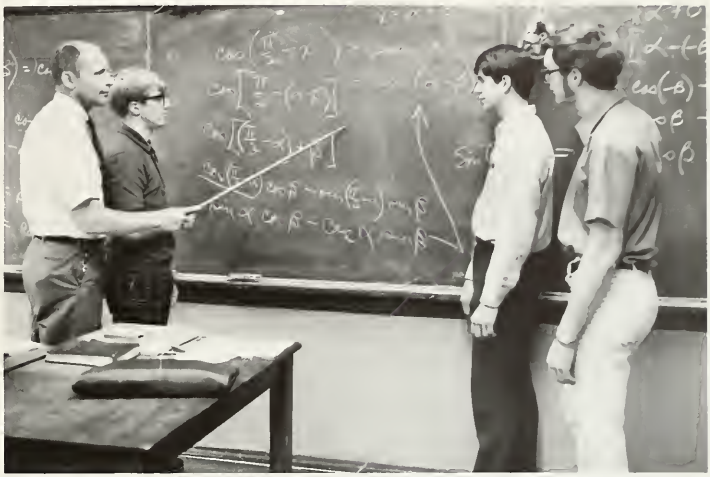
Physics students involved themselves in water pollution and petroleum projects, while others produced new kinds of plastic. Students gained facts about the earth below and above its surface in earth science, while biology offered knowledge about nature and her products.

Math is necessary to live in today's society

"Today there is an emphasis in aerospace, so four years of math is required in order to get into almost an apprentice school," said Mr. Charles Clark, department head, as he explained the math program.

The department offers a course in geometry, advanced algebra, trigonometry, and some classes in refresher courses.

More students are taking math now than in the past. A student who does take four years of math has a chance for a career in either business, math, or science. Three years of math is almost necessary to live in today's busy society, Mr. Clark adds.



Mr. Byard Hey shows Martin Curdes, Greg Friend, and Larry Fogle how to work one of many complicated trigonometry problems.

Rick Cutigni, Kathy Carter, and Sue Davis receive help in advanced algebra from Mrs. Rita Pepitone, who is student teaching for Mr. Donald Hunter.

Phil Godtrey in geometry uses an overhead projector to demonstrate the accuracy of drawing a circle.

Foreign language uses help from tape,

Third year French students listen to a taped lesson by the use of headsets. The equipment aided classes immensely in the study of all foreign languages.

The foreign language department, headed by Mr. Paul Lemke, experienced its third year of audio-lingual methods of teaching in French and Spanish. Films, filmstrips, and tapes were an important part of the presentation. The language lab helped students learn of their progress as the instructor listened to them individually and helped them with their dialog pronounciation.

Several students returned to Spanish classes in September after spending their previous summer or portions of it in Spanish-speaking countries. Janet Bossard, spent her summer in Spain. Dennis Hansen was sent to Mexico to live with a family for six weeks after qualifying in a test of general knowledge of the language. Terri Mensch visited Mexico on her own.

Mr. Derman Villacorta, Spanish exchange teacher from Peru, returned to teach his second and final year before returning to teach in his country.

Third year Spanish classes had the advantage of being separated into two classifications for the first time, with the new Y lane as an experiment.

German students used lab instruments for the first time in the classroom. Latin students occasionally took advantage of the language lab, but used text materials widely.

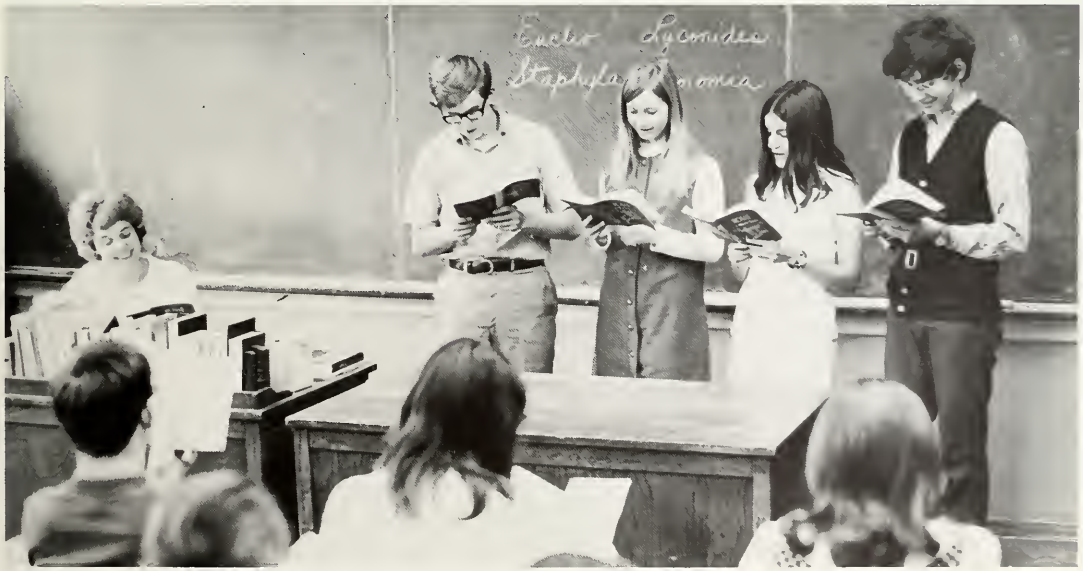
German students also use headsets. Mr. Tom Dohrmann's second year class listens, recites, and then works on words.

headsets to increase vocabulary, pronunciation

Mr. Dohrmann points out important subject matter while senior Dwayne Hartup listens attentively.

Mr. Derman Villacorta explains to Mark Adams, Vanessa Fiscus, Bob Bridges, and Lori Kuester about the traditions surrounding the Spanish Pinata.

Chuck Miller, Kathy Goshert, Maren Kolin, and Tom Johnston recite a Roman play in Mrs. Janet Weber's Latin 5 class.



In beginning journalism, students are taught how to prepare material for the Northerner and how to proofread copy.

Journalism examines communication in class

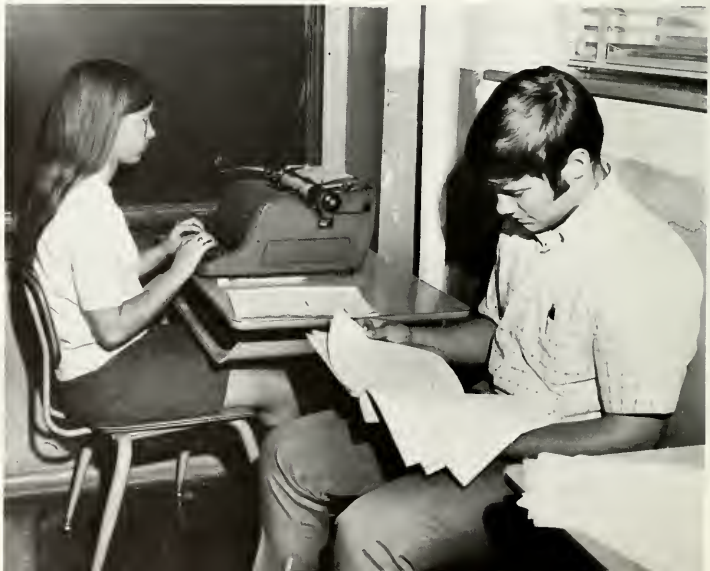
These members from the Northerner staff get together to discuss layouts and stories for the paper.

The journalism curriculum helps students develop communication skills at many levels. In beginning journalism students learn an appreciation of mass media by studying some characteristics, problems, and history. They try to produce material that is used by the media.

The Northerner staff meets every day to put the school newspaper together. Gathering news and informing 'Skins keeps the entire staff busy.

The Legend staff works together to put memories of the year in words and pictures. They accepted many responsibilities that are necessary in producing a yearbook.

Pat Markey and Steve Bogenshutz work together typing and reading off names, for the underclass pictures in the yearbook.



T.V., video tape, help speech department

The speech department took on a new look with equipment added to North Side's facilities. The video tape machine and television sets gave many students a first-hand understanding of how they look and sound while giving a speech.

More students were involved in Speech I and II, than in past years, and the new schedule had not hampered the speech classes any. Speech students applied what they had learned by participating in speech and debate tournaments. The team was among the top 10 in Indiana.

Classroom activities consisted of preparing and presenting humorous and informative speeches while classmates acted out many responses of the audience.

Using the television set, many beginning and advanced speech students can improve on weak areas in their performance.

Rose Sizemore presents a speech in Mr. Gary Schultz's speech I class to an attentive audience.

Dave Aumiller, after much preparation, gives a speech before an audience. Topics are varied and introduce discussion.

Art helps Redskins express inner feelings

Demonstrating the art of lithography are Bruce Henschen, Denise Antone, Mike Krempel, and Carole Masloob.

Students who think art classes just drew pictures of animals and still life sketches are taught to think again in art. Before a student enrolls in advanced art he must take a basic art course dealing with fundamentals.

Miss Marjorie Bell, department head, displayed many of the articles students made on their way to a new interpretation of art. Advanced art classes made objects like belts, jackets, and purses on looms, sketched and designed boxes, and made rings from different metals and stones.

"Art helps the students express themselves and understand more about themselves through creating different objects" said Miss Bell. Each class displayed art drawings and sketches by hanging them in the art hall.

Beginning art students study one of the two undone stairways. They transfer what they see to paper.

Students in beginning art practice on drawing a Holland shoe, a crucible, and an old lantern.

It's a fight! No, Mr. James Purkhiser just tells his beginning students that making a scene look real is part of acting.

Renovation caused cancellation of Senior Play

The drama classes innovated and revised schedules as they adjusted to reconstruction problems. Renovation of the stage caused cancellation of the Senior play.

However, they worked toward the time in the second semester when facilities were again available and they could use the stage for one play and Varsity Varieties.

Beginning and advanced drama classes practiced doing pantomimes and plays, emphasizing words and movements.

Drama III students present a reader's theatre for their classmates.

Acting out a scene, Drama II students try improvising after the manner of "Dark of the Moon."

Music Department expands; more

Nan McBride, a feature twirler, takes twirling at football and basketball games in stride.

Diligence and long hours are necessary to present a concert, as the wind and string sections of the orchestra prove.

Janet Bossard, Rae Doenges, Jimmy Schaeffer and Jane Collens make up one of Mr. Roderick Gerrard's several guitar classes. These classes offer availability of the Music Department to students not enrolled in it.

Directing the band and sometimes the orchestra takes much of Mr. Barry Ashton's time. In addition he also coordinates the Arrowettes and twirlers with the band.

vocal divisions, more classes

The Troubadours practice for coming concerts. Once the smallest group in the department, it has been divided into several smallergroups.

Mike Folk, Byron Black, Larry Stacy, and Tim Mills comprise the color guard. They appear at football and basketball games.

Because the Senior Play was cancelled, seniors instead attended the Senior Cabaret presented December 3 by the Music Department. Cabaret involved most of the 450 members of the vocal and instrumental sections.

Other concerts included a school assembly on December 23, and three public concerts: one in February and two in May.

Because of the great number of singers, A Cappella was divided into Troubadours, the folk group, Madrigals, and girls' ensemble.

The instrumental groups played outside of the Fort Wayne area and for Indiana University Regional Campus. Involved in the schedule was a band trip after their annual candy sale and fish fry dinners in October, January, and May. During the football season, the group sold red and white cushions called swingers.

The instrumental groups divided during the basketball season and formed the Pep Band, which attended most of the games and helped bring out the North Side Redskin spirit.

Social studies influenced lives of 'Skins as they Senior Jim Andrews explains a problem to his classmates in Mr. Certain's economics class.

The Social Studies Department, headed by Mr. Cleon Fleck, offers history, government and economics, sociology, world affairs, and a communist seminar. They are designed to let each student know what has happened in the past and what is going on today.

Because it was an election year, classes had a special project; they discussed the candidates the week preceding the elections and also studied Indiana government. Then they voted for their choices.

Sociology centered around people and their problems. Economics classes studied democracy as a structure, while the communist Seminar studied the threats of communism—past, present, and future. World affairs compared other parts of the world and their problems to the United States. Government present principles about the functions of our government and developments for the future.

In the regular Friday current events discussion in Mr. Waveland Snider's world history class, Diane Stetler discusses a timely topic from the newspaper.

These United States history students get together to discuss the upcoming election of the state and local government. These students, along with other social studies students, were able to vote in the classroom for their favorite candidates.

were taught the ways of government

Mrs. Renee Bleifeld, student teaching for Mr. Augustus Schoonover, explains the answer to a question raised by a student.

Four students made up Mr. Ronald Certain's communist seminar. The class discussed communism and its affect in the past and future.

Mr. Cleon Fleck's United States history class listen to another student express his opinion about a question raised in the class. His classes discussed topics from the newspapers and magazines to keep up with current events around the world.

What makes motors work? Bill Schrader, Randy Kindig, and Ken Elder listen to an explanation as they examine the parts of a common motor.

Chuck Distelrath uses one of the new desks as he works with rules and fine point pencils to develop accuracy and a drawing.

Industrial Arts classes develop precision

In beginning electronics, these boys have put together an electrical circuit in which all four light bulbs glow. Then they test amounts of voltage.

The shop, completed last spring, maintained its new look for those involved in the Industrial Arts Department. A trophy case stood in the hall for projects and the entire complex was brightly lighted and had accoustical ceilings.

The wood room contained storage for lumber and a dustproof staining room, while the metals room featured thick concrete dividers between each welding block in the class area. The motors room had an air hood to draw out fumes from internal combustion and a large area in which students constructed four-cylinder motors.

Electricity and electronics were housed in a spacious room with all the necessary space for storage. Beginning Drawing featured a step-down floor with high desks slanted for ease in drawing. The advanced drafting room doubled as a darkroom for developing blueprints drawn by the students.

Bob Shelton, senior, polishes a container made in industrial arts, while Dave Diver, Dennis McQuery and Craig Christman paint one of the many projects which takes both precision and a careful hand.

Clothes, food, living discussed in Home Ec

Despite the impression that the Home Economics Department is open only to girls, it has been teaching boys since the family living class was instituted. This dealt with marriage and family living and in the second semester concentrated on managing a family and learning to live within a budget.

The department also offers the more traditional courses. Intermediate sewing and advanced clothing emphasize knowledge of wardrobes and sewing clothing. Intermediate and advanced foods concentrated on cooking and the selection of menus and food.

Home nursing and child care dealt with family health, home care of sick persons, and child care and development. Housing and home decorations considered problems such as house planning and materials and equipment used in decorating the home.

Debbie Workman, Ruth Knuth, Jane Dodan, Kathi Key, and Connie Zimmerman plan different menus for breakfast, lunch, and dinner.

Darcy Middleton, Kathy Gross, and Julie Mossburg make up part of the family living class. They discuss family problems and what is actually involved in home life.

Sara Pressler shows how she figures out patterns, uses a sewing machine, and finally makes clothes for casual and dress occasions.

Organizations

It's a new world on the inside

Redskins have been active in more than thirty organizations during and after the school day.

But we have seen a change in the club program, bidding a fond farewell to the Daffy Dabblers and to the Business Club. Audio-Visual Club selected a new name for themselves, and will now be known as the Projectionist Club under the sponsorship of Mrs. Noble.

Some clubs were hampered by renovation. However, it certainly did not dampen the enthusiasm, for clubs continued to show our true Redskin spirit.

Club members worked hard on many money making projects. They also donated much time to the service projects that are a part of their program each year.

Many have offered their services to the school by aiding in parking for ball games, working the concession stands, and sponsoring dances after games. To make money they planned ventures such as the swinger sale, fish fries, and candle sales; or they sponsored successful booths at the school carnival.

Cooperative education instructs, prepares

Investigating and questioning business practices is standard procedure for the D.E. 12 class.

Mr. Richard Irving explains a general problem of business to his D. E. class.

Practice in typing and accuracy is necessary for some students involved in cooperative education.

students for vocations after graduation

Distributive Education provided a combination of study and an on-the-job training program. It dealt with students in the field of sales. Mr. Richard A. Irving is the instructor of this fund-raising organization.

Industrial Cooperative Training, ICT, is a program for the high school juniors or seniors who wanted to learn a trade or technical job. Mr. Hyrle Ivy instructed members and chose the right jobs for the students. This year the student employees gave a banquet for their employers and took a field trip to Chicago.

The Vocational Industrial Clubs of America offered students a chance to try their skills against other students of Indiana.

Mrs. Janet Weber, Sue Armstrong, John Feasel, Sue Lamb, and Kay Carlson discuss plans for the next meeting.

Latin students learned to appreciate the civilization, language, and art of ancient Greece and Rome in the JCL Club.

A potluck dinner at Bev Morris' house started the club's activities, which included a fall picnic at Franke Park, a Christmas party and a spring picnic with MLC, and the annual traditional Roman Banquet. At the banquet, which was the highlight of the club's activities, everyone dressed in togas and new members were "slaves" of the old members.

To adjust to the ten-period schedule, JCL had meetings in the afternoons and the evenings. The club sponsor is Mrs. Janet Weber.

MCL has two picnics, Christmas party

Dawn Hunter and Jody Snyder discuss MLC's final meeting.

Changing from one meeting once a month, the MLC members met three times during the school year. MLC, the Modern Language Club, made preparations for a fall picnic in September where they played football and danced to records. The members met in December for a Christmas get-together and sang carols. Afterwards they enjoyed cookies and punch. In May, MLC combined with JCL for an end-of-the-year picnic.

Officers gathered for business meetings to discuss dues, membership, activities, and plans for next year. Membership was open to any person who had a foreign language of Francais, French; Espagnol, Spanish; or Duetsch, German.

Helicon members gain insight to literature

With the help of Mr. Robert Pugh and Mrs. Kathleen Neuhaus, the members of Helicon acquired new insight into literature.

Helicon required that the senior and junior members have a B plus average in English. In the second semester, the sophomores who had an A- average in English may join.

As it has in the past, the club gave the English Cup Award to the outstanding English student of the year.

Their year began with a potluck dinner and closed with the annual Spring tea and the farewell banquet. Other activities were the annual talent show at Allen County Home at Christmas and sponsoring a booth in the carnival.

Steve Wolf, vice president; Mary Jo Dick, social chairman; Alice Trichsler, secretary; and Mark Stine, treasurer; get together to plan future meetings and parties for Helicon.

The National Forensic League, coached by Mr. Gary Schultz, is an honorary organization where students become members after accumulating 25 or more points by speaking in tournaments.

Fourteen active members work for the possible thirty-three degrees: The first, Degree of Merit, is worth twenty-five points; the Degree of Honor, seventy-five points; Degree of Excellence, one hundred-fifty; Degree of Distinction, two hundred-fifty; Double Ruby, five hundred.

In addition to participating in speaking contests, members served public groups that asked for a speaker and received points for these speeches.

North Side delegates brought home 12 awards from the Legislative Assembly at Purdue University.

Kingsmen make plans for tournament

The Kingsmen, a chess club under the sponsorship of Mr. Alvin Harris, made their plans in the hope of competing with other schools, including a tournament with South Side.

Club members who already had an understanding of the game competed among themselves for training and practice to point out moves that would keep them out of "Checkmate."

They kept track of the points for each other, with members participating in the tournament against the other schools.

Projectionists help with films and slides

The Projectionists Club, sponsored by Mrs. Zola Noble, meets once a month to discuss new equipment and problems the student might be having with the equipment.

Members are in charge of transporting audio-visual equipment and seeing it is properly taken care of. They learn how to run projectors, recorders and other equipment and investigate careers in the field of audio-visual.

When a teacher needs to order certain films for classes he reserves the projector also with the projectionists. Then, if need be they will see to it that the film is ready and show the teacher how to operate if need be. They know how to operate the machines and know about all the different parts and how they function.

Jack Reader teaches Kerry Farrell the basic fundamentals of a movie projector.

Helping 'Skins occupies student librarians

"There are many jobs for the student librarians to do, and they prove to be quite helpful," stated Mrs. Fae Stafford, head librarian.

Some of their duties are to check books in and out, help shelve them sometimes, collect fines, file cards, fill out hold slips, stamp and put away magazines.

The requirements are to know the Dewey Decimal system and be willing to contribute their time. They also should know how to use the card cataloges so they can help the other students find the books they want.

Thespians change to international club

The National Thespian club changed its name to the International Thespian club.

The 15 members of the purely honorary organization have a choice of interest in what part they want to work at from stagecraft to acting. They have an honorary banquet and a formal initiation each year.

Renovation had slowed the production of plays but the Varsity Varieties and some plays had been given after the auditorium was opened.

This organization brings a new atmosphere of dramatics from funny nonsense plays, to a hard hitting suspense story. These plays shown to students in the afternoon are repeated for parents and guest that night.

Key Club helps orphans, parks cars, ushers

Due to renovation, Key Club, a service club for boys, met only on Thursdays during the tenth period.

In the earlier part of the year, they held a membership drive for prospective members. Each boy was asked to fill out an application, which was then evaluated.

Members ushered at the Fort Wayne Children's Ballet and the Christ Child Festival. They also parked cars at ball games, did work at the State School, had a paper drive, and took orphans to ball games. the Key, North's student directory, was published by the Key Club.

Sponsors, Mr. Ronald Certain, Mr. John Tipple, and Mr. Larry Bott assisted the club.

Helping make several families' Christmases happy, Key Club members empty the gym of the donations made by 'Skins to the Christmas Bureau.

Journalists gather for awards, fun

Quill and Scroll and 1500 Club are to recognize students who have done work in publications. The former is open only to seniors who have ability in publications and have performed outstanding work. Members must be recommended by the adviser, Miss Norma Thiele. 1500 Club is for Northerner staff members who have received 1500 points or more according to the amount of work completed.

Neither club had regular meetings but functioned as an organization when necessary. Together the two planned two social activities, the awards banquet, and the Spring picnic for the publications department. There are no officers or chairman; every one plans the activities together.

With a grimace of surprise, Miss Norma Thiele accepts her gift at the annual Publications Banquet. Mark Hansen, m.c., explains that the bone was something she could chew on instead of persons who came to class late.

Quill and Scroll members are Wanda Norris, John Antonides, Cindy Suback, and Susie Wehrenberg.

Bill Wiegand and Connie Hoylman work together in planning the layout for an issue of the Northerner. They do this each week before the copy is sent to the print shop. Layouts are checked to see when articles are needed for completion of a spread.

At the typewriter, Bob Andrews puts last minute touches on the final draft of his copy.

Being in the darkroom or shooting pictures is the usual daily activities of photographer Pat Knight.

Amy Didier discusses plans for the Northerner by phone with another staff member.

Appealing to the student of today was the chief concern of the Northerner staff. They accomplished this through articles on curriculum and an Action Line in which they tried to find answers to problems of the school.

The Northerner entered the Quill and Scroll competition for newspapers and received the International Honor Rating, which was the most superior achievement it could obtain.

Legend brings personal abilities and leadership

Becky Francies, student life editor, discusses changes in copy for her section with Wanda Norris.

The Legend staff of fifteen students worked on specific individual assignments and helped each other meeting deadlines.

Requirement for staff membership was interest in writing and a desire to help publish the yearbook.

The editor and copy editor, however, were expected to have previous experience.

The purpose of the yearbook was to provide a service for the students and the school by making a record of the year. It also helped to develop individual talents in communication skills by collecting information and putting it into usable form.

Bureau project and book store.

Giving students a voice in the school government, Student Council keeps communication open between students and teachers.

Of the three standing committees, Spirit Committee is in charge of Spirit Week. It judges the posters and helps promote spirit throughout the entire year.

The Ways and Means Committee deals with problems students may have on the dress code, while School Problems committee deals with all the problems students have about schedules.

The Council also serves as a liason with the general community and the city government in terms of North Side participation in pollution control, student-government relations, and projects designed to help the city with its growing problems.

The chairman of the various committees, the council officers, and representatives and alternates for each home room make up the council.

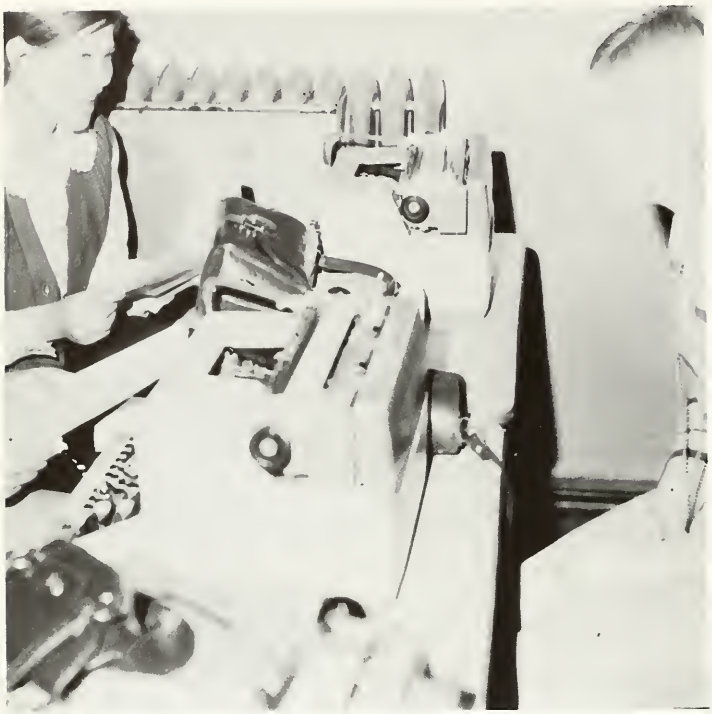
Z Club activities include carnival, bake sale



Club member Dawn Hunter interviews Kaye McKinnis for membership from the questionnaire she filled out

Renovation condensed Z-club into two meeting groups instead of three which met to plan projects during fifth and tenth periods.

November included the annual carnival, while projects such as bake sales, caroling, the sale of suckers, valentines, and sectional corsages, and a Sadie Hawkins dance followed. Mrs. Jacqueline Hutmacher, Miss Rosalie Doust, and Mrs. Sherry Gerber aided the girls with the projects; and fifth period president is Lucy Wilson, and tenth period president is Nancy Scheeler. In December old members welcomed new members who worked on the various projects.

Tri-M exposes its members to music

Tri-M, Modern Music Masters Club, is a national honorary music society of the top music students from the major performing groups.

Each semester the actives nominate other music students to be invited to audition for the club. The selected few become spikes and serve the club for one semester before becoming active members.

At the monthly meetings the spikes perform music from their own musical fields of ability. A concert is scheduled for the end of the year.

Tri-M members are (front row) Joyce Harsch, Sue Lamb, Jody Snyder, Steve Wolf. (Row two) Sharon Rediger, Sue Brickman, Denise Hoffman, Debbie Hart, Robert Rogers, Colleen Sedam. FSA Members Promote Secretarial Field

Through films such as "The Invisible Diplomat" and by listening to speakers from the business world, members of the Future Secretaries of America promoted interest in secretarial work and encouraged further education in the secretarial field.

Under the sponsorship of Mrs. Irma Johnson, the club was open to advanced shorthand students. Mrs. Jean Carter, a coordinator from the Tawasi Chapter of National Secretaries, helped the club organize its programs.

Activities included selling mod stationary as a money-making project, a formal initiation and installation, and an informal Christmas party.

Varsity band, open to all wind, brass and percussion players, consists mainly of sophomores. This prepares them for concert band, which is a more advanced instrumental group. The varsity band performed at the concerts on their own.

Seniors and juniors who have already been in the varsity band, and selected sophomores form the concert band. Each year they play at the Winter, Christmas, and Spring concerts.

Often during the school year they travel around the city and perform at various schools.

New was the Percussion Ensemble. The group was assembled because there were a large number of students in the percussion section in the concert band that otherwise would not play. The ensemble consisted of a varying number of members that performed at the concerts.

Seventy-five members made up the orchestra while those students on string instruments may go on into concert orchestra. The members performed throughout the year for junior high schools and assemblies, besides attending the Chicago Symphony in March and participating in the Manchester Symphony in April. In addition to this, they participated in the NISBOVA contests. Mr. David Platt directed the orchestra at approximately a dozen performances throughout the year.

String ensembles included 14 people whose main purpose was playing dinner music, chamber music, and taking part in the NISBOVA contest. String members must be among the best players in the orchestra to qualify. The String Ensembles played under the direction of Mr. Platt.

Girls' Ensemble, a division of A'Cappella, blended together nine voices. They sang at a few concerts separately from the A'Cappella. Direction of various songs was by Mr. Roderick Gerrard.

The 85 juniors and seniors in A'Cappella were chosen by special auditions open to anyone. The performed at the Christmas and Spring concerts, and even recorded a special Christmas program for television.

A'Cappella was divided into four groups: The Folk Choir, The Madrigal Singers, Girls' Ensemble, and the Troubadours. Each member was placed in a group to give all the singers a chance to perform in a smaller ensemble.

Troubadours was the second largest group, having 30 members. Since A'Cappella was too large to travel easily, Troubadours represented North at out-of-school concerts.

Folk dancing was included in the repertoire of the Folk Choir as the 34 members performed a variety of folk and contemporary songs such as those sung by Peter Paul and Mary, Simon and Garfunkel, and the Kingston Trio.

A'Cappella was under the direction of Mr. Willard Holloway during the first semester. He was succeeded by Mr. John Hill and Mr. Roderick Gerrard.

Twirlers, Madrigals perform to entertain

Madrigal members are Steve Oliver, Sara Colpitts, Greg Sult, Sue Brickman, Joy Brunson, Rick Cutigni, Cheryl Renn, Mark Stine

Arrowettes were made up of majorettes and pom-pom girls. They performed as a single group, and some times separately at football and basketball games. Arrowettes participated in the NISBOVA contest along with the marching band and in separate twirling contests.

They were required to participate in band camp during the summer and to return later for twirling camp. They also helped with the music department fund-raising drives. Mrs. Betty Wagner served as an adviser to the Arrowettes, under the direction of Mr. Barry Ashton.

Madrigals was a group of four boys and four girls in which there were two each of sopranos, altos, tenors and basses, each singing a different octave, making it a difficult group to keep up with. Madrigals were directed by Mr. Roderick Gerrard and started by Mr. Willard Holloway, as it was the first year possible with the time and faculty to do so.

Several of these types of groups were started to give students a chance to be in a special group other than A Cappella. It was required that all A Cappella students were to have been in an extra class such as this.

Wildsiders and Stage Band rehearse jazz

The Wildsiders consisted of approximately twenty students who were selected by audition. This was a dance band organization for students that had the desire to learn some advanced skills in music and perform them well. Basically, the students concentrated in the jazz area. The group was made up of trombones, saxophones, a pianist, a drummer, a string base, and a guitarist.

They participated in school concerts and social events as well as the Notre Dame contest. Rehearsal Stage band was also a dance band for students who wanted to learn more in music than what they ordinarily did in band class. They concentrated on the same type of jazz music as did Wildsiders. They participated in outside events when invited and in school activities and concerts. Like the Wildsiders, it was made up of the same instruments. Neither organization had a class time to meet and came in either before or after school hours. Two other bands of this type were organized to teach only the skills and fundamentals but did not participate in actual performances.

Under the joint direction of Mr. John Hill and Mr. Roderick Gerrard, the Sophomore Choir learned the basic fundamentals of vocal music. Being in the choir provided the students with a chance to go into Chanticleers or A'Cappella and Troubadours.

About 96 members performed at the Christmas and Spring concerts. The Chanticleers included about sixty senior and junior girls who practiced during the sixth period each day.

Under the direction of Mr. Hill, the group performed at school concerts and also had many outside concerts throughout the school year.

Library, office, gym facilities improve

Tearing up and rebuilding, plastering and hammering, workmen gradually transformed the old study hall into a new library.

Although renovation has been a decisive factor in every phase of Redskins' experiences as school, the clubs have been seriously affected. Because of lack of members, some disbanded; others combined forces, and the rest went through the year with fewer members or continued as before. D.E.C.A. had so many new prospects that not all those students could be placed in jobs. JCL increased its members, while MLC stayed about the same in membership and decided to meet only three times during the school year. Business Club and Secreary Club joined into the Future Secretaries of America. Others, such as railroaders and Daffy Dabblers, became obsolete. "Combine and Conquer" was another order of the day when Key Club joined into one large group from the three of previous years. Z-Club followed this example and formed two different clubs from three.

Even with the ten-period day, caused by renovation, affecting clubs, members' enthusiasm more than made up for these problems.

With all the seats chopped off in the auditorium, the Senior Play was cancelled for lack of a place to have these and other events.

Nearing completion, the boys' gym needs much more done to it before the first basketball game throughout year as renovation progresses

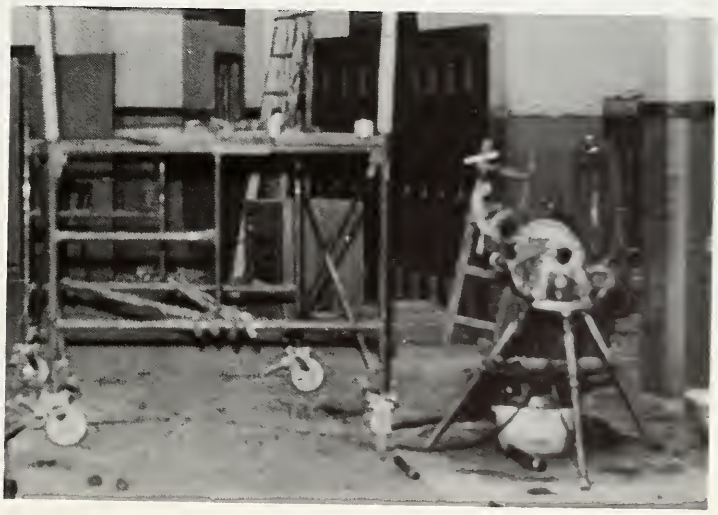
An orderly clutter prevails in the auditorium as work in it continues.

Before school starts, busy workmen clutter the halls with scaffolds, equipment and other paraphenalia involved in getting the job done on time.



Renovation goes sky high as welders prepare the gym rafters for new heating, lighting, and P.A. systems, and a false ceiling.

The crane plays a big part in renovation; it enables the workmen to reach the gym windows without stretching.

Dr. Bill C. Anthis presents a plaque to Superintendent of FWCS Lester Grile at the North Side-New Haven game. The plaque was to mark the completion of much-needed renovation in the gym.

A pile of trash is not an uncommon sight as renovation progresses. 'Skins also became accustomed to seeing exposed pipes and wires.

The new teachers' lounge will eventually be furnished and have a built-in kitchenette.

One restriction caused by renovation that became quite common for 'Skins is keeping out of posted areas where heavy and final construction work is going on. For the first semester, one of these areas was the entrances to the boys' gymnasium.

Although once used as a storage area, the new library was opened according to schedule.

Sports

It's a new world on the inside

North Side's huge facelift has given the athletic department several new facilities and pieces of equipment. Two locker rooms, an asphalt track, three tennis courts, and a new gym were added. These additions and the same Redskin pep and determination of previous years, molded together another exciting athletic season. The gymnasium, the site of past basketball tourneys and the largest gym in the area before the construction of the Coliseum, has been transformed in renovation. Although the ceiling was lowered to prevent echoes, improved lighting and heating systems have been added, the real spark of modernization has come from the new red vinyl seats, replacing the hard brown wooden ones. It's really a new world inside the old gym.

From the North-Concordia game, where both football teams literally swam through the mud . . . from the traveling basketball team, always searching for new places to practice . . . from the members of the swimming team who voted to disband because they had difficulty finding a practice place . . . to the wrestling team, which under all these pressures recorded their best season ever, it's really a new world on the inside with athletics.

Many fine athletes produce leading scorer

The Varsity football team, compiling a 3-6-0 record, started out strong with a 3-1 record, but lost the rest of their games by one or two points or a single touchdown.

North Side came upon a few obstacles along the way. They won against Heritage in the rain, but couldn't overcome Concordia in one of the worst rain storms football has ever been played. Another obstacle was a powerful Central team that won the city race and was ranked in the top twenty of the state.

There were many outstanding players as shown by the Scalpers Club, which picked the best defensive football players at their positions. The teams also had a top scorer in the city, Tom Mensch.

Captains Al Figel and Dan Gebhart meet at the middle of the field with Goshen's captains for the traditional tossing of the coin.

Starters on North's defense, called the Renegades, smother a Central ball carrier on an attempted sweep around the right end.

Lonnie Lamb makes a long gain against Snider. Lonnie's fine speed enabled him to outrun his defenders.

Things began on a high note when the reserves fought back from a 12-0 deficit in the third quarter to defeat Elmhurst's Trojans 13-12. They then lost to Concordia, and Bishop Dwenger beat them in a rainsoaked game in a very muddy field.

By scoring 30 points in the Bulldog game, their highest total for the year, the reserves showed a wealth of potential to contribute to 1971 varsity campaign.

Beside the regular meets, the team placed third at the Goshen and fourth at the Laporte and Shortridge invitationals and fifth at the sectionals. Coach Duane Rowe felt the outstanding meet was the Laporte Invitational, where the Harriers placed fourth out of 27 teams.

Tim Zumbaugh, a senior runner, was a consistantly high placer with many firsts throughout the season. Tim placed second at the sectionals. The Harriers ran several miles each day, starting during the summer, to get conditioned. They compressed the running hours to each night after school during September and October, agreed Coaches Rowe, Walters, and Esterline.

Intramurals provide fitness for students

Students kept active during the year in boys' and girls' intramurals. This supplied some fun for those who wanted more exercise than walking home from school. Boys' intramurals were forced to leave the daytime scene and move to Monday and Wednesday nights because of the new scheduling and the construction. The boys also played in the girls' gym until the main gym was completed; then both facilities were used, with as many as 50 boys and faculty members showing up on some nights.

The girls started in February playing volleyball following tenth period. The girls were under the supervision of Mrs. Kathleen Capper, and the boys followed Mr. Joseph Dipietro.

Gary Harshbarger takes a jump shot in the last minutes of an intramural game, while his teammates are guarded by the defending team in the boys' gymnasium.

Junior Sue Markey bats the volleyball over the net as teammate Kris Taylor looks on. Volleyball was the first activity for the girls in the girl's intramural program.

Junior Mike Leach takes careful aim and shoots, hoping for a basket to put his intramural squad ahead.

Junior Dave Busian returns a hard-hit serve to his opponent, keeping his eye upon the ball at all times.

Mark Stine, junior returning letterman, serves to his opponent in a tennis match early in the season.

The amount of talent and skill gained by the Redskin netters this year is certainly not reflected by their 5-7-0 season record. There were several very close matches where the winners and losers were decided by one point.

The team was rather new and it proved to be a rebuilding year. Renovation brought with it three new tennis courts, enabling the players to practice at school for the first time in North Side's history.

Senior Dan Fair served as the captain this year. The coach, Myron Henderson, explained that the only returning tennis player next year will be Mark Stine. The rest of the team will go to Northrop or Elmhurst.

First city title to Mr. Hunter,

For the first time in the school's history, the grapplers seized the city wrestling title and finished third in the sectional. Although they tied Elmhurst for the city race, the team outdid themselves after coming from a 2 and 9 record last year to an 8-2-1 record this year. The vast improvement was probably due to the extra hours of work and conditioning. The team, Coach Donald Hunter, Coach Keith Fisher, and Coach Tom Deohman should all be commended for a job well done.

Others to be congratulated are the cheerleaders and the mat maids who did an outstanding job keeping score, making signs and promoting school spirit. The fans should not be forgotten, for the attendance has picked up considerably with many Redskins and parents at some matches.

The faculty and student body should all be proud of the fine year the wrestlers had.

Co-captain and heavyweight grappler Denny "Moose" Parker pins Gary McCleary of Warsaw; North lost the meet 19-24. Parker ended up with a good season of 13-7 as well as runner-up in the sectional tourney. For the first time North won the title of city champs, but had to share the honors with Elmhurst. Both had records of 8-2-1.

Senior co-captain Tom Smith struggles to pin Central grappler Mike Lasley in the Skins' second meet of the season. Tom had his best season in three years with 16-2-1.

Senior Dennis Runkle desperately hangs on to Dave Meeks of Central. Runkle, along with Russ Hutson, won sectionals in his weight class.

Ripplettes practice new aquatic stunts

Ripplettes held tryouts for prospective members during the fall of the year. The girls had to attend these workshops to learn some of the basic stunts on which they would be judged.

Under the direction of Miss Ann Donnelly, both new and old members learned swimming techniques and stunts.

Due to the renovation of the swimming pool area, the girls practiced at the YWCA pool.

Both varsity and reserve squads practiced during second period. These sessions helped the girls to perfect new cheers, work on the standard cheers, and come up with new and exciting chants.

At summer camp, the team came home with a first place trophy to the girls as a team and third place for individual achievement to Gayle Brinker.

The squad purchased new uniforms this year in addition to recieving the uniforms worn by past squads.

Miss Ann Donnelly, along with the help of Mrs. Kathleen Capper, sponsored both cheerleading groups. Mrs. Capper and Miss Donnelly, assistant, sponsored the girls' cheerblock.

Along with leading the school enthusiasm and spirit at pep sessions, they also bolstered morale at athletic events. The cheerleaders and cheerblock worked out a card section which they used at the sectional pep session and games. Then they sold Christmas and Thanksgiving candles to raise money for their needs.

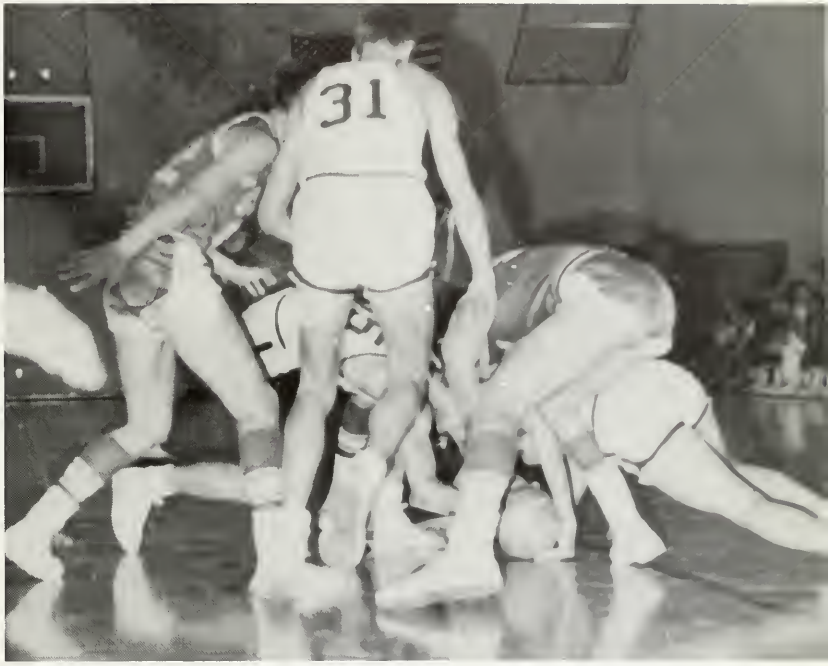
has ups, downs, in preparing for sectionals

The basketball team couldn't quite recapture the city title because of a slow start, but the Red came through and put things together around the middle of the season. The 11 and 9 record doesn't indicate some of the fine play exemplified by the Redskins. The team's overall height and good depth led many to believe that the team would be a tourney contender, and they were picked by some to win the sectionals.

The construction in the school did not permit the basketballers to play a game in the gym until late December and forced home bouts to the Snider and Elmhurst gyms. When the facilities were finally opened and dedicated, the team led off on the right foot by defeating New Haven before a large and enthusiastic crowd of students, parents, and public school officials.

The Skins were led in scoring by Joe Lombard with 204 points while Mike Rich came in second with 183 tallies. Joe was also the team's leading rebounder with a 272 total, while Todd Habegger had 270.



Todd Habegger comes to help Dan Gebhart as he fights for the ball during what seemed to be a free-for-all during some exciting action. This may not be one of the finer moments, but it shows the hustle and determination the boys had while on the court.

hopes shattered by Trojans in regional

The Redskins defeated Carroll 66 to 60 in the sectional opener and South Side 60 to 48 in their second game. Neither victory came easily, for what Carroll lacked in height they made up for in hustle; and the Archers proved strong with towering height.

The Concordia Cadets were the toughest team the Skin's faced, for the two tenacious defenses forced an overtime period in which the Red triumphed 47 to 43.

The regional title wasn't recaptured as the team fell to the Trojans 64 to 50 in their afternoon tilt.

North Side has first up with baseball

Dan Gebhart and Joe Lombard decide to get a little baseball practice in during a recent track practice, hoping to play baseball when track concluded.

Construction of new high schools with baseball diamonds, prompted existing schools to start baseball teams. North Side's team planned to practice at City Utilities Park, where all the home games were scheduled.

The high school teams will enable more players to participate in baseball. This year's players started practicing the Monday after spring vacation, under the direction of Coach Tim Russell, and concluded with the State Tournament in June. Next year, Fort Wayne athletic officials plan a Fort Wayne High School Baseball League which will continue throughout the summer.

Prospective baseball players meet to discuss Coach Tim Russell's plan for the season and to look at some new equipment which had just arrived.

It's a new world on the inside

Either active as an individual or moving with the group, the Redskin of 1971 set the pace for the world around us. Minis and maxis, beads and chains promoted by a trendsetting generation grew in popularity. Each person remained an individual even though he followed the trends in fashion as a way of expressing his feelings toward certain ideas.

While it was a simple matter for some, for others, adjusting to a ten-period schedule was difficult and sometimes called for surprising new solutions. Extra free periods gave some students a chance to make new friends and to develop their unique personalities. For others the three extra periods gave them an opportunity to take more courses.

Each student showed his pride in North. This was displayed by enthusiasm during Spirit Week and by backing the teams at basketball games and other sports events. The pride of having attended North will always remain the same. Even though renovation made it a new world on the inside.

Suzanne Wehrenberg pace honor groups

Individuals, groups earn recognization

Redskins achieved awards ranging from those for groups to the personal awards given for citizenship. Homerooms were recognized for their involvement in school events; individuals were recognized for attendance, honor roll, by outside groups, and participation in different sports events.

Awards given in the field of athletics ranged from the letter jacket, pins, and blanket, to the highest award, the ring.

The English Cup is given each year to the Senior who scores highest on a special test.

The Betty Crocker award winner, Sue Wehrenberg, peeks at the almost-done pie.

Honorable redskins receive awards

Tami Zahn, Dan Gebhart, and Sue Wehrenberg all received Good Citizen awards.

Miss Elizabeth Little was awarded the Spirit Trophy because of her year-round enthusiasm.

Semifinalist in the National Merit Scholarship program was senior Greg Carpenter.

Dr. Bill C. Anthis keeps spirit high

Miss Majorie Bell, Mr. Donald Hunter, and Mrs. Sherry Gerber stop to talk to the "Big Chief."

It's a new look, explained Dr. Bill C. Anthis, but we should not forget that students and faculty make up the education.

Although the year was quite confusing due to the noise and turmoil of renovation, the spirit of students was excellent. One difficulty was that many students were not in contact with the others due to the ten period schedule. By depending mainly on various groups, Dr. Anthis expected the spirit to stimulate the others, both student body and faculty.

In preparation for next year, Dr. Anthis has been visiting various schools looking for different and new techniques in the education system.

Dr. Bill C. Anthis arrives early each morning to begin a long day.

Big Chief Anthis inspects the totem pole which South Side had for five years. North won it back in football.

Faculty works, helps, and even has fun

Mr. Beryl Lewis is explaning concepts of chemistry to one of his three lecture classes.

When they run into problems with their machine, Mr. Thomas Schaefer lends a helping hand to his boys.

All work and no play is no fun. Here Mr. Keith Fisher, Mr. Larry Bott, and Mr. Dale Goon have a little fun at a Spirit Assembly.

As the first term comes to a close, Mrs. Sandra Haiflich spends her free time figuring the grades.

Cooks and custodians sometimes forgotten, but not overlooked

Mary Olinske is busy icing rolls as many hungry Redskins await their presence.

Much of the hard work of the janitors and the cafeteria ladies is sometimes overlooked, but it is always appreciated. These loyal friends silently made life easier for all students under the Big Dome. With renovation playing a big part in the role of every Redskin, these persons had a harder duty to perform. School started earlier and ended later, making preparations and deadlines shorter.

Seniors achieve first, last milestones

Marlene Wetzel adjusts her mortar board as she prepares for her final North Side ceremony.

Kay Carlson takes a peak at the ruler as Bruce Ackerman measures her for her cap and gown.

Seniors Larry Longardner and Janet Sanders stop on the front steps to talk about their years at North Side.

Student Life

It's a new world on the inside

Happiness, serenity, aggravation; life of a Redskin. Spirit Week provided competition among classes working as a whole, striving for spirit. Cheers sounded as each class won first, second, or third place ribbons, while each class accepted the retirement of the Spirit Trophy.

High Honors gave 'Skins a certain pride while others studied for tests. They ran for buses, rehearsed plays, attended assemblies, walked alone or hand-in-hand, and experienced the routine of daily life. Striving for a certain goal in live, Seniors looked forward and tried to decide their future. Most Juniors prepared for their senior year, perhaps at Elmhurst or Northrup because of boundary changes. Sophomores adapted to North Side's ways and looked forward to more exciting years at high school.

Renovation provided limited space and cluttered hallways, along with noise. Students adjusted to all the difficulties built up from phase two, and teachers adjusted to a more liberal kind of education. As memories were made, Redskins searched others' hearts and found it's a new world on the inside.

Assemblies meet in new gym and stadium,

Skins showed appreciation for a variety of assemblies ranging from pep sessions, music concerts, and ones just providing entertainment.

Traditional assemblies met, such as the opening assembly where new teachers were introduced; Senior Recognition Day, emphasizing achievements of the individual students; and class meetings, where officers were nominated and installed.

In addition to these assemblies, the entertainment assemblies all met in the stadium or gym. Among those for entertainment were the Christmas Program and one by a champion horseshoe thrower. This year Varsity Varieties started later than usual. Tryouts started the week before spring vacation and rehearsals began the week after.

Former Redskins, Nancy Redman, Ron Annis, and Debbie Gething, return to talk to students about college. They told about registering, courses offered, and the various phases of college life.

Mr. Dan Kucheinski, champion horseshoe thrower, tries for another ringer as his wife Sue, a gymnast, also performs before an audience.

Redskins again participated in the Christmas Bureau project. At the Christmas program, Mark Adams, presented the gifts to Mrs. Darvies, head of the Christmas Bureau.

Varsity Varieties rehearsals delayed

Three advanced drama students audition for a spot in Varsity Varieties as a singing trio.

The waiter turns down two ladies as they beg him for a free drink.

Four prison cell-mates sing to remove the drudgery of the day.

The "battle of classes" is in progress as the senior and junior girls battle for a victory in the annual powder puff football gwme.

Students display spirit without trophy

"Spirit Week, one special week out of the year, really shows our support for the team and creates a little competition between the classes to see who has the most spirit," said Mr. James Lewinski.

Each class is given one floor for posters and any other signs to show thier spirit. Points were awarded for the posters according to design, originality, and quantity.

It gives the student a chance to actively participate in such activities as the powder puff football game and tug of war.

Seniors Ken Hixon, Bill Harker, Brian Norton, and Dan Fair vigorously lead their class in a cheer during spirit week.

A change inside, a change in fashions

Junior Becky Schmid wears bell-bottom slacks on a cold winter day.

This year, North was invaded by maxis and midis. Here, sophomore Debbie Sylvester shows her interest in fashions by wearing a maxi.

John Desmond, in his Army green trench midi, and Sarah Pressler, in her blue-jean bell-bottoms, stop in the hall for a little chat.

Junior Mary Greulach portrays her interest in the fashion world by wearing a monk's cape; maxi coats still remained dominant, though.

As the 1971 school year came to a close, students looked forward to many changes in the coming year. Seniors saw colleges, careers, and marriages in their futures, while juniors and sophomores prepared for returning to North or transferring to Northrop, or Elmhurst because of redistricting.

Renovation had definite effects on the student body. Because the stage and auditorium were being renovated, the Senior Play and other assemblies were cancelled. Good effects also resulted: students enjoyed a new library and improved facilities. Although basketball games had to be scheduled in other gyms early in the season, the remodeled gym was the scene for all-school assemblies such as the Christmas Bureau assembly and the exhibition by the world champion horse-shoe pitcher and his wife. Student Council tried to obtain a parking lot for students from existing space. "It's a new world on the inside" for all those persons involved in this year.

Mr. Paul Watters helps Linda Eloph decide upon what size and tone she wants for her senior pictures.

WATTERS STUDIO at 3121 S. Calhoun is noted for "photographs of Distinction." BURGER CHEF at 2909 E. State provided students with "food good enough to leave school for." INDIANA AND MICHIGAN ELECTRIC COMPANY at 2101 Spy Run not only provides an essential public service but also sponsors youth programs and activities in Fort Wayne.

During a free period, juniors Claire Rammel and Jack Woodruff go to Burger Chef for a tasty lunch.

Juniors Beth Fremion and Wendell Sprunger realize the great community services of I&M Electric Company.

Juniors Wendy Robertson and Steve Bogenschutz admire this new '71 model at Allen County Motors.

Strolling behind school, juniors Donna Onion and John Henschen notice the reconstruction being done by Irmscher Construction Company.

IRMSCHER AND SONS CONSTRUCTION at 1030 Osage does a fine job in reconstructing North Side as well as other projects in the area. ALLEN COUNTY MOTORS at 511 W. Main, "The Little Profit Dealer," congratulates the graduating class of 1971.
